

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Misses several of his tall feathers, otherwise battered and still somewhat green, the republican rooster struggled to his feet Wednesday morning and after surveying this section of the county and general results in the state gave vent to a lousy crow of victory. He had been through a hard battle on Tuesday and made herabours to feel that the democratic birds have become harder than ever to conquer, but he had cleaned up on general results and felt entitled to be elated over the general victory of the party in Connecticut.

As has been indicated several times in this column during the past few weeks, the democrats were especially active this fall and their labors showed results in Tuesday's voting. Here in Killingly they gave the republicans a scare on the vote for representatives and the republican representatives-elect won off by a narrow margin as compared to the usual liberal majority given candidates of their party. In the case of state senator, the democratic candidate went out of his home town of Killingly with a majority. The chief reason for the republican ranks occurring in the second and third districts of the town, the vote shows. Tuesday's results will stir the republican organization to great activity in building up its strength in the two years.

Down in Plainfield, the rejuvenated democratic party swept the board with majorities for all its candidates and will send two representatives to the legislature. In Brooklyn and in Sterling, towns with only one representative, the democrats elected their candidates. In Canterbury two republican representatives were also elected as representatives.

The republicans went out of Windham county with a majority for their state ticket, elected their candidate for sheriff and two state senators and a majority of their representatives for the legislature. They also gave majorities for their candidates for United States senator and congressman, but they were not the old-time party majorities in Windham county and there were times Tuesday evening when party leaders were really doubtful as to what the final returns really would show in one town or another. Putnam is credited with the strongest republican showing in this section.

Naturally the democrats are gleeful over their victories in towns like Abington and their general strong showing in the county.

Which party suffered most by the failure of many hundreds of Windham county voters to go to the polls was a matter of conjecture. At least 500 did not vote in the town of Killingly and there were probably three times that number in the 15 towns of the county that stayed away from the polling places.

County and Federal Game Warden Harry E. Batty called attention on Wednesday to the fact that the season for shooting white or snowed rabbits closes on November 24. He said that as brings the close of the season for shooting the ordinary grayish-brown rabbit. This is not understood by many that hold hunting licenses, Warden Batty says, and he is desirous that all should be notified in due time to prevent unintended violations of the law. White rabbit hunting is a late fall pastime in which many indulge in territory herabours, especially in the eastern section of the town.

Against Wednesday morning The Bulletin brought into this section of the state the only complete returns on the vote for United States senator, congressman, and officers on the state ticket as well as a complete list of senators-elect of the Connecticut legislature covering Windham county to—na. The Bulletin also carried called votes from several eastern Connecticut towns that appeared in no other publication. This achievement was made possible not only by the county, where facilities, but also by the fact that it does not go to press until several hours after other state papers had come into this territory, the extra hours of leeway allowing the receipt and tabulation of late returns not available for other papers.

Charles S. Hyde, democratic representative-elect from the town of Brooklyn, where he defeated Representative Frank Spalding, republican, on Tuesday, is a former legislator, having represented Canterbury in the 1911 session. He is one of the best known citizens of that part of the county, a retired farmer and for years was actively identified with the affairs of the Windham County Agricultural Society. Mr. Hyde polled much of his strength in the East Brooklyn district of the town and owes his election chiefly to the gain he made in that quarter.

Arthur DeForest, one of the new night patrolmen, is a World war veteran, having served overseas as a member of the 8th Coast Artillery. He enlisted with the 13th company, Coast Artillery, C. N. G. here in Danielson on Memorial day, 1917, and was honorably discharged from the service January 28, 1918, after serving nine months in France. He had ratings as a corporal and first class gunner.

In many instances the radio did not quite measure up to expectations in supplying elections returns Tuesday evening in Danielson and vicinity. Static electricity interfered with the service and while there were times when considerable information was forthcoming from the apparatus it did not on this particular occasion furnish the service which has been given in other times by telegraph and telephone companies.

Danielson's Armistice day observance is only two days ahead. Following a meeting of the committee of arrangements at the central fire station Wednesday evening, it may be set down that this observance should be the most elaborate and impressive since the memorable first one in 1918. Six-service men will parade, escorted by the Service battery and civic and municipal organizations. Danielson will honor the men and the ever by big display of national colors and business will be suspended during the afternoon hours. Visiting ex-service men will be entertained by members of local patriotic organizations growing out of the world war.

Mrs. Louis E. Kennedy as a delegate from the local chapter and Mrs. George J. Hensault, Mrs. Frank Gorman, Mrs. Clara Kado, Misses Elizabeth Gorman and Katherine Moran will motor to Hartford Saturday to attend a conference of the Woman's Catholic Welfare council at the Hotel Bond.

Mrs. Henry Leach of Wauragan has been the guest of Mrs. Louis Sholes. The Crystal Water is continuing the work of flushing all of the hydrants in the borough, as the periodical custom of the town.

Miss Louis Galliehan of Furnace street and Francis Gagnon of Dayville were united in marriage Monday at St. James' church. Mr. Gagnon is an overseas veteran, having served in France with the famous Yankee division.

Mrs. Simon Danielson had members of the Benevolent Society of the West-hill Congregational church at her home for a meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Judge W. Fenner Woodward has been quite seriously ill the past few days at his home on Broad street.

Miss Cathryn Coffey spent the week end at her home in Hampton.

Mrs. Marge Smith of Hampton was the guest of friends here recently.

Miss Mary Connor, Mrs. Michael Connor, and Mrs. John Gain of Putnam, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Greeley, Sunday.

Miss Anna Dawley has received news of the death of her cousin, Henry Phillips, of Wyoming, R. I.

PUTNAM

Study during Wednesday of the election returns shows that the republican organization of Putnam made good in greater degree than did the party's workers in any of the larger towns herabours.

All candidates on the republican ticket in this city were elected by substantial majorities, a similar margin given for candidates on the state ticket, while a surprisingly large vote was given G. Harold Gilpatrick, state treasurer, who received a majority of 1968 in this his home city. This is the largest majority ever given a candidate with opposition in Putnam and attests the popularity of the genial treasurer in his home town. The returns also show that more than half of those who voted the democratic ticket in the local election split their tickets so as to give Treasurer Gilpatrick a vote.

Up in Thompson the democrats managed to break through the republican line for a gain of one representative, Fred A. Munyan, democrats, being elected along with Fred L. Hutchins, republican. This was forecasted for the past weeks and was due, it is said, to certain operations within the republican party that did not appeal to the voters in the industrial villages of the town.

Pomfret elected two republican representatives, J. Fred Ash and Joseph Stoddard, Woodstock two more. Eastford will have one republican and one democratic representative in the next house. As usual, Ashford was democratic.

In Windham county as a whole the republicans' normal majority was materially reduced and party leaders realized on Wednesday that they must work and work hard to bring the voters back into line before the presidential election of 1924.

The refusal of the school committee of the town of Killingly to pay transportation to the state trade school in his city for any person not considered a child has raised an interesting point and the attorney general of the state has been asked to make a ruling on what the word children means, as to age, in the statute under which provision is made that transportation shall be available in towns where no state trade schools are located for persons who would attend such schools in other towns of the state.

It is understood that the Killingly school committee contends that adults are not children and that the state is not liable to pay transportation for any person over 16 years of age.

Students at the state trade school here are representative of a number of towns and are having their transportation paid by these towns. Killingly is the first of the towns to raise the point that has been referred to the attorney general and his office's decision will be awaited with interest by school officials in this town.

Next Tuesday evening when the common council meets in regular monthly session, this meeting adjourned on election night, it is likely that the matter of election of a mayor to succeed Mayor Archibald Macdonald, now postmaster in this city, will be one of the chief subjects to be considered. The charter provides that where vacancies occur during the term of mayor that his successor shall be elected from among the membership of the common council.

In his recently report Ralph C. Jenkins, superintendent of schools, mentions that the county commissioners have granted the use temporarily of another room at the home for children, the room to be used for school purposes. This arrangement is not to continue beyond the present school year, however. Miss Alice E. Cronin has been appointed as an assistant to Miss Edith Fox, teaching in the Sawyer school.

There was a regular football rush for early arriving newspapers at news stands in the city Wednesday morning and supplies of papers published in the state were exhausted soon after their arrival. Every one seemed anxious to read the results of the election. In lesser degree the rush for papers continued throughout the day and evening editions, were eagerly purchased to get a line on state's that were listed as doubtful in the morning.

Attorney Charles L. Torrey, member of the state board of education, has received copies of a pamphlet in which the rules and regulations recently adopted by the board and concerning state teachers' certificates are set forth. General conditions for all certificates set forth are that to receive one an applicant must be at least 18 years of age, must file all necessary school records, listing previous academic and professional training; file satisfactory testimonials as to moral character, file a physicians certificate as to being in good health and file, in case of previous public school teaching experience, satisfactory testimonials of teaching success.

The Junior league of the Methodist church has a meeting scheduled for this (Thursday) afternoon.

Windham county will have more democratic members in the house of representatives during the session of 1923 than at any time for the past decade. This is due to unexpected democratic gains in different towns of the county on Tuesday. An increase is noted this week in the
